Market Commentary

Global markets were driven by continued tensions in the Middle East, rising energy prices, inflation, and interest-rate hikes by various global central banks. Brent crude rose 14.4% MoM, bringing its YTD returns to a staggering 70.1% and pushing prices above $100 per barrel. This increase saw energy and transport costs rise across the globe, making inflation even stickier. Global equities proved the “September Effect” true, as stocks and markets once again struggled during the month. The MSCI World fell 1.2% MoM, bringing its YTD gains to a positive 12.7% and delivering 1.4% positive return for the quarter. AI chipmakers fared exceptionally well, with Intel, AMD, Marvell, and Micron returning 34%, 30%, 25% and 11%, respectively. These companies contributed 1.0% to the S&P 500 performance over the month. Meta’s Muse AI personal assistant gained popularity and was adopted by a large number of users within a short period, helping drive the company’s stock price up 27% MoM.

Rising fuel prices and inflation weighed on the UK market, with the FTSE 100 declining 2.0% MoM, bringing its year-to-date gains to 6.8%, while it remained up 1.0% in the third quarter of 2026. Motor fuel inflation rose to 23.0% YoY from 15.5% in July while higher transport costs pushed August inflation to 3.1% YoY. While the majority of global central banks raised borrowing rates, the Bank of England kept its interest rates steady at 3.75%.

Following six months of positive gains, European equity markets took a breather, following the broader global market trend. The Euro Stoxx 50 dipped 2.2% MoM, and fell 1.0% in Q3 2026, although it remains up 11.0% YTD. Germany’s DAX fell 4.0% MoM, though it remains up 2.9% YTD and up 0.8% in Q3 2026. Meanwhile, France’s CAC 40 declined 4.4% in September, bringing its year-to-date return down to 2.3% and ending the third quarter 5.2% in negative territory. The European Central Bank also joined global central banks in raising interest rates. Higher fuel prices along with increased borrowing rates, pushed eurozone inflation to 3.2%.

Emerging markets also took a breather last month, with chipmakers SK Hynix (+7%), Samsung (+6%), and TSMC (+3%) cushioning the index against a steeper decline. Political sentiment and commodity prices pushed Brazil into positive territory, making it the only emerging market to end the month on a high note (+5% MoM). The MSCI Emerging Markets Index ended the month down 0.56%, although it remains up a staggering 23.38% YTD. A sharp sell-off at the end of September sent Chinese equities to multi-month lows, as weak macroeconomic conditions and geopolitical uncertainty dampened sentiment. The Shanghai Composite and Hang Seng Index both declined 3.6% MoM, pushing their YTD returns 3.2% in the red, while their 3Q26 return fell 6.2% in negative territory. The manufacturing Purchasing Managers’ Index (PMI) rose to 50.1, ending September in expansionary territory, while the non-manufacturing PMI also ended the month in expansionary territory at 50.2. Japan’s Nikkei gained 0.7% MoM, bringing its YTD return 32.6% higher; however, the index fell 4.7% in 3Q26. Headline inflation printed flat at 1.9%, the same as in July.
