QUARTERLY MINIMUM DISCLOSURE DOCUMENT (MDD)

FUND OBJECTIVE

The investment objective of the Cell is to achieve capital appreciation over the medium to long term. The Cell is multi-asset flexible fund, investing primarily in global markets. There will be no limitations on the relative exposure of the portfolio to any asset class.

INVESTMENT PHILOSOPHY

The investment policy of the Cell is to create an actively-managed portfolio providing exposure to various asset classes including equity, fixed interest, property and money market. The Cell may invest in securities directly or it may invest in portfolios of collective investment schemes or other similar schemes that provide exposure to the relevant asset classes, or both. Investment performance is targeted through asset allocation, security and portfolio selection.

FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY

One of the "truisms" of global financial markets is that they are more rational than we often assume. Investor nature looks to calibrate risk in a linear sense while financial markets operate in a complex system. Chaos theory explains the difference well. In a simple complex system such as a game of chess the player may beat the computer. In a more complex system such as the Chinese game GO it's much harder for the player to beat a high-end computer as the complexity of computation is orders of magnitude greater. In the world of financial markets which discount infinite complexity the probability reduces to near zero. That being the case investors are better off understanding the signals from markets as opposed to trying to predict the next bull or bear market.

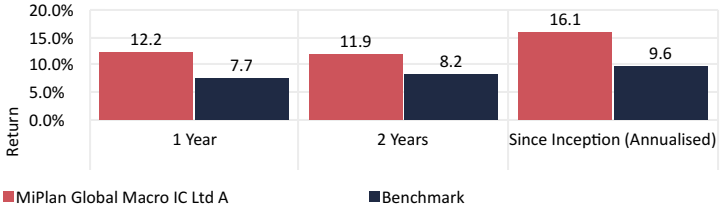

Real rates in the US have risen strongly reflecting accelerating growth along with higher inflation expectations. But the number of companies making new highs in the US and globally is falling, leaving markets a little vulnerable in terms of breadth. Bull markets in equities love earnings growth which remains strong primarily in the US and Japan but need breadth to broaden to sustain higher prices. Global equity markets have begun to reflect these developments. Following a strong recovery earlier in the year, September brought renewed volatility as rising bond yields challenged equity valuations, particularly in the United States. The S&P 500 declined by approximately 0.5% during the month, while the MSCI All Country World Index, measured through a US-dollar ETF total-return proxy, fell approximately 1.2%.

Higher discount rates are particularly problematic for growth-oriented companies whose valuations depend heavily on earnings expected well into the future. The concentration of global equity indices in a relatively small number of highly valued US technology companies therefore remains an important source of market vulnerability.

The broader concern is that bond and equity markets may increasingly become correlated during periods of fiscal stress. Rising yields would ordinarily be welcomed if they reflected stronger economic growth and improving corporate earnings. However, when yields rise because investors demand greater compensation for inflation uncertainty, fiscal deterioration and excessive government borrowing, the implications for equities are considerably less favourable. Higher risk-free rates compress valuation multiples, increase financing costs and reduce the relative attractiveness of equities, even where underlying earnings remain reasonably robust.
